Conférence internationale sur le transport des marchandises par chemins de fer.

International conferences for the regulation of transport of goods have been held since 1878, under varying names. As there is no uniform name for the successive conferences, the above form has been adopted by the Library of Congress for all publications of which the conferences may be considered the author. The sequence of the conferences is as follows:

Bern, 1878; Bern, 1881; Bern, 1886 — Resulting in the Convention of 1890; effective 1893.

Bern, June 5-12, 1886 (Technical conference) — Resulting in Additional agreement of July 18, 1895.

Bern, 1905 (2d revisional conference) — Resulting in Additional convention of 1906; effective 1908.

Bern, 1911; Bern, 1912 (Technical conference); Bern, 1923 (3d revisional conference) — Resulting in revised Convention of 1924; effective 1929.

Rome, 1933 (4th revisional conference) — Resulting in revised Convention of 1933.

All publications dealing with the conventions (agreements) on transport of goods (and later, of passengers) are grouped under the subjects:

International transport convention, 1890.
International transport convention, 1890—Revisions, 1901.
International transport convention, 1890—Revisions, 1906.

A more detailed statement of the conferences and of the conventions to which they led, is given below:

The study of the question of the international transport of goods by rail dates from 1874, when two Swiss jurists, de Seigneux and Christ submitted to the Swiss Federal chambers a petition for the convening of an international conference whose task it would be to regulate, in a uniform manner, certain especially important sections of legislation in regard to rail traffic. This petition was transmitted to the Swiss Federal council which sent it to the governments of four neighboring countries.

Conférence internationale sur le transport des marchandises par chemins de fer. (Card 5)

The latter requested Switzerland to draw up the preliminary draft of a convention to regulate international rail transport. This draft was examined in 1876 by a Committee of experts, and was then communicated to eight states. The draft was restricted to traffic in goods. Germany also prepared a draft, which consisted chiefly of amendments to the Swiss draft.

The first conference took place at Bern May 19–June 4, 1878. The two drafts were discussed article by article, resulting in a draft International treaty with a code of regulations and a draft Additional treaty regarding the International commission which it was desired to establish, and which was the first step towards the creation of a Central office.

The second conference, held at Bern September 21–October 10, 1881, was entrusted with the revision of the draft of 1878. The International commission, for which provision had been made, was converted into a Central office.

The third conference, held at Bern July 5–17, 1886, continued the work of its two predecessors.

The final text of the Convention of October 14, 1890, which was the result of the deliberations of the third conference, came into force on January 1st, 1893, at which time also the Central office was entering upon its duties. The signatory states were those which took part in the first conference.

A technical conference was held at Bern June 5–12, 1886 to make certain revisions, which resulted in the Additional agreement of July 18, 1895.

A diplomatic conference was held at Bern June–July 1893, which resulted in the Additional declaration of September 20, 1895.

The first conference for the revision of the convention was held in Paris March 16–April 2, 1896; the same states took part in the conference as in that of 1878. The final Procès-verbal became Additional convention of June 16, 1898. The latter, when ratified, was incorporated in the original convention, and the new text came into force October 10, 1901.

A second revisional conference met at Bern July 4–18, 1905, resulting in Additional convention of September 19, 1906. The new text of the convention of October 14, 1890 came into force December 22, 1908.

A conference was held at Bern May 16–30, 1911, to consider modifications of the convention.

A technical conference took place at Bern July 8–19, 1912, which drew up a draft of a new Annex I. Owing to the European war the diplomatic conference required for the transformation of the draft revisions into a convention, was not held.

A third conference of revision was held at Bern May 1–June 8, 1923, continuing the negotiations interrupted by the European war. The text of Annex I was signed October 23, 1924. A diplomatic conference was held at Bern October 18, 1927, for ratification, and the revised convention became effective October 1, 1928.

A fourth conference of revision was held in Rome, October 3–November 23, 1933, resulting in the revised convention of November 23, 1933.

Conference of representatives of provincial museums in Britain, Sheffield, Eng., 1917.

At the meeting of the Museums association held in London July 10, 1917, the Executive committee was instructed to arrange an adjourned meeting for October 2, provided a minimum number of 50 delegates undertook to be present. As a sufficient number did not respond, notification was sent out August 2 that the meeting would not take place. Meanwhile a circular dated July 24 bearing the Sheffield post-mark and purporting to be official, though not authorized by the association, had been issued to members, but this also was without result. A third circular was issued September 3 by Mr. E. Howarth, curator of the Museum and art gallery, Sheffield, which eventuated in the conference held October 16-17, 1917, "Conference of representatives of provincial museums in Britain", composed of members of the Museums association and representatives of all provincial museums. cf. Museums journal, v. 17, no. 4, Oct. 1917, p.
